Environmental Partnership

Our design approach links site opportunities with client needs through a thorough understanding of the physical and social environments in which we are working. Our planning and design solutions integrate function with site responsive design form to express identity and sense of place.

I-India Project Australia proudly acknowledges Environmental Partnership's valuable contribution to the Jhag Children's Village. Landscape Architect Belinda Graham developed a stunning design, for what is currently a dry and dusty site, that utilises recycled, inexpensive, and local materials. The innovative and contemporary design takes into account traditional Indian social environments and honours local Indian ideals of community. The landscape design for Jhag Children's Village provides sensory stimulation for growing minds and bodies, special places to sit and connect with others, and spaces for peaceful reflection. During 2010 we hope to begin work on Environmental Partnership's vision so that both the rescued street children who live on site, and the poor children from surrounding villages can visit I-India's centre six days a week and enjoy the extraordinary environment where healthy imaginations, brains, and bodies can develop. I-India Project Australia thanks
Environmental Partnership for its support.
